Description

A distinguished pair of Victorian period cut glass vessels, comprising a decanter and a claret jug, each beautifully formed and masterfully cut to capture the elegance and precision of mid 19th century craftsmanship. The bodies are of graceful teardrop form, finely decorated with bands of horizontal step cutting above richly executed cross over diamond-cut panels, creating a play of texture that speaks to the glassmaker's skill. The necks are surmounted by faceted ball stoppers that echo the rhythm of the design below. The jug, with its sweeping applied handle, completes the pair with sculptural balance and utility.
