Description

An exquisite Regency period cut glass jug, beautifully decorated with bands of tight diamond cutting to the lower body and elegant horizontal step cutting encircling the upper section. The handle and neck are enhanced with fine mitre cutting, adding both texture and brilliance to the design.

The jug's graceful proportions and precision-cut detail exemplify the refinement of early 19th-century Irish glassmaking. Likely intended for serving water at the dining table, it reflects the neoclassical elegance and sparkling craftsmanship characteristic of the Regency era.
